By reporting fraud, you will enable Nottinghamshire Police to build a true picture of the type of fraud being committed. This means that we can use our resources more effectively to prevent crime in the future.

In this booklet you will find advice and information on how to protect yourself from scams. There is a useful list of support organisations at the end of this booklet.

Please also share this information with family and friends to help protect them. Should you require any additional support from the Fraud Protect team, please contact us via nottsprotect@notts.police.uk.

Fraudsters will attempt to target you in a variety of ways, including via the telephone, online, on the doorstep and through the mail. There are steps you can take to protect yourselves and others from being targeted in these ways which have been included in this booklet.

It's worth remembering that you'll never be contacted by a genuine organisation and asked to hand over money to a 'courier', asked for bank account or personal information or be requested to purchase vouchers / goods to assist with an investigation.

You should never feel ashamed or embarrassed about being targeted for any kind of scam. Our dedicated Nottinghamshire Victim CARE support service is here for you should you need further ongoing support due to this incident. Visit: www.nottsvictimcare.org.uk or Tel: 0800 304 7575.

Report any fraud to Action Fraud via: <https://www.actionfraud.police.uk/reporting-fraud-and-cyber-crime> or call them on 0300 123 2040.

Romance fraud

Romance scams involve people being manipulated into thinking they are in a romantic relationship and sending money to fraudsters who will go to great lengths to gain trust. They will use language to persuade and convince so that their requests for money do not raise alarm bells.

These requests will be highly emotive. Fraudsters claim they need money for things like emergency medical care or to pay for transport to visit the victim. Fraudsters will often build a relationship with their victims over time.

Fraudsters will want to quickly switch to social media / texting to avoid the dating site scam protection from detecting their grooming tactics and to hide their requests for money.

Be wary of excuses when the person can't video call or speak on the telephone. Fraudsters will often pose as someone working in remote locations where contact can be problematic such as the military or on an oil rig.

Beware of:

Anyone asking for personal details about you and your background but gives little information about themselves.

Vague communication around personal interests, excuses for not meeting or speaking on the telephone.

Someone telling you how much they want to visit, but need a loan to pay for tickets, visas, medical expenses for ill family members, discharge fees from their current job or for essential goods.

Discrepancies in profile location, for example the profile is in Malaysia but they are looking for a relationship in Germany.

Profile names being different to the name of the person you are speaking to online. For example user name 'Davidin2u' and first message received states 'Hello how are you, my name is Kelvin'.

Use only reputable dating sites and their own messaging service:

Ensure sites are part of the Online Dating Association (ODA).

Keep safe:

Your private life should stay private until you know that person, have met face to face and can start to trust them. To protect yourself, ensure you have all applicable security settings set to private, preventing strangers from finding out everything about you.

Speak openly about your dating:

Use trusted friends or family (don't let embarrassment put you off). If you're involved emotionally, it's hard to stay objective. Alert them if a contact starts to feel strange, especially if the subject of money is raised. If their advice is to back off, LISTEN! They have no emotional involvement and can provide a level of judgement with your best interests at heart.

FALL FOR THE PERSON, NOT THE PROFILE.

Stop. Taking a moment to stop and think before parting with your money or information could keep you safe.

Challenge. Is this person really who they say they are? Could their profile picture be fake? It's ok to refuse any requests for financial or personal details.

Protect. Contact your bank immediately if you think you've fallen for a scam and report it to Action Fraud on 0300 123 2040 or via actionfraud.police.uk. If you are in Scotland, please report to Police Scotland directly by calling 101.

TO STOP FRAUD

Telephone scams

Phone scams are a common way for criminals to trick people into giving their personal details so that they can obtain money. Beware of some of the most common phone scams and find out what you can do to stay safe.

Beware of calls where the caller says they are from your bank or the police about fraudulent use of your credit or debit card, or bank account. A scammer will ask you for all your bank details including the number on the back of your card (the CVV) and your PIN. They may also tell you that you need to give your bank card to a courier. Neither your bank nor the police would ask you to do this.

You will never be called by your bank or the police to move your money to a safe account due to your account being compromised.

Be wary of any calls or text messages from unknown numbers offering products or services, such as pensions or debt management.

Be wary of callers stating that you are paying incorrect council tax or that you are entitled to a council tax rebate. Your council would never call you about a rebate, you can check your details online. Be wary of calls asking you to pay to renew a membership for Telephone Preference Services, this service is free.

The most commonly used telephone scams:

HMRC:

Victims are told they owe money to HMRC for outstanding tax. They may even be told there is a warrant out for their arrest. This scam is designed to create a sense of urgency and panic.

Courier scams:

Fraudsters will sometimes pose as police officers or bank officials. Victims are often told there is a problem with their bank account, or their assistance is needed in an undercover investigation. Victims may be asked to withdraw money from the bank or hand over their card and PIN to a courier.

Tech support:

The person may call you to say that your computer has a virus, they will ask to access your computer and download software to fix it, this may be "Spyware". This will give the fraudster access to everything in your computer including your apps, emails and contacts and your online banking.

Beware of:

Calls purporting to be from HMRC, they will contact you by letter, NEVER a call.

NO legitimate debt can be paid in gift vouchers – HANG UP!

Don't trust your Caller ID. Fraudsters use a technique called 'spoofing', which allows them to 'hide' behind an authentic number, making a call appear genuine. They often use banks' telephone numbers.

HANG UP and call the organisation on a genuine number, ensuring the line is fully disconnected. If possible, use a different phone. NEVER call back on the number given to you on the call.

The police and banks will NEVER call you and ask you for card or bank details, PINs, or to withdraw cash. You will never be asked to assist in an undercover investigation into the bank. They will never send someone to your home to collect cash or goods - HANG UP!

NEVER agree to download any software onto your device off the back of a cold call.

Telephone Preference Service (TPS):

Free opt-out service for individuals who do not want to receive unsolicited calls.

Tel: 0845 070 0707 or visit: www.tpsonline.org.uk

True Caller App:

For smartphones you can download the True Caller app from any app store. Register your details & regularly update this to significantly reduce nuisance calls.

Call Blocker phones:

BT 4600 Cordless Nuisance Call Blocker phone is an example of what nuisance call blocking aids are available.

Make your phone number ex-directory:

To avoid having your phone number listed on websites, you need to contact your provider to have your number made ex-directory. This means your number won't appear in local telephone directories.

Changing your telephone number may also be a consideration.

Phishing emails/texts

Phishing is when fraudsters use scam emails, text messages or home calls to trick their victims. The aim is to make you visit a website, which may possibly download a virus onto your computer, or steal your bank details and other personal information.

Emails threatening a negative consequence, or a loss of opportunity unless urgent action is taken, are often phishing emails.

These are the things to look out for:

- Emails with bad grammar and spelling mistakes
- Emails with an unfamiliar greeting
- Inconsistencies in addresses and links
- Emails with suspicious attachments
- Emails requesting login details or payment information
- Emails with unusual characters in the domain e.g. info@companyname-mail-department.com

Beware of

Couriers/ Delivery companies:

Messages stating you have a missed delivery and there is a small charge for re-delivery. Do not click the link! You do not have to pay to rearrange delivery.

TV Licensing:

Your payment is due, or you're due a refund.

PayPal:

There is unusual activity on your account.

Amazon:

There is a problem processing an order and to click the link to confirm log in details.

Sextortion:

Claim to have accessed a victim's devices following viewing pornographic websites.

HMRC:

You're due a tax rebate.

How to protect yourself

NEVER click on any links or attachments. Even 'unsubscribe' links can be malicious. Verify the email via a trusted source, such as logging into your Amazon / PayPal Apps directly to check any messages.

Use your spam filter. If you detect a phishing email, mark it as spam and DELETE.

The email address in the 'from' field is not guaranteed to actually be from that email address. Like telephone numbers, fraudsters can easily spoof email addresses to appear genuine.

Watch out for spelling or grammar errors like this in the subject field. This is an attempt to get around your spam filters.

Bogus Callers - Doorstep Sales

Beware of

Traders:

They might say that they have noticed something wrong with your property that they can fix.

Fake Police Officers:

They could ask to see your bank card and ask you to tell them your PIN number.

Door to door sales:

These people could be pushy, offering large discounts and limited time offers.

Gas and electric personnel:

People who claim to be from a gas or electricity company, but do not have any official ID.

Charity collectors:

Seem pushy or cannot supply a registered charity number, asking you to sign up for a direct debit or make a standing order.

Joe Bloggs:

A person/people who have come into your home saying that they need help, for example, they need to use your phone or they feel unwell or want to use the toilet.

What to do

You DO NOT have to open your door to anyone that you do not know. If you do, always think: Stop, Lock, Chain and Check.

STOP:

Think, are you expecting anyone?

LOCK:

If not, lock any other outer doors before answering the front door, as sometimes scammers work together.

CHAIN:

Put the door chain on (but remember to take it off again for people who have access with a key – such as home help, children or your partner as they won't be able to get in). Always look through the window or a spy-hole to see who is there.

CHECK:

Ask for their identity. Check the card for the business that they say they are from and check that the photo is of the person that is standing before you.

Get an official telephone number off your bill or the internet and use that number, not the number they give you.

Do not worry if you leave someone waiting, leave them outside of the property, not the inside and lock the door.

If you feel pressured or unsafe, contact friends, family or call the police on 101.

What to do

Never buy from doorstep sellers.

Ask for a “no cold callers” sign from your local council or print one off from the internet and put it in the window.

Set up a password with your utility providers to be used by anyone they send around to your property so that you can be sure that they are genuine.

Do not be embarrassed to say “NO” or to ask people to leave.

Never sign anything on the spot. Take the time to think about any offer, do your research, even if it seems genuine at the time. Where home improvements are concerned it is always best to get several written quotes before deciding.

Don't accept deliveries or anything you did not order that's addressed to you. If you accept them without realising, contact the company they were sent from or your local police.

THINK: If it sounds too good to be true, it probably is.

Support can be obtained from Action Fraud and Citizens Advice who will contact Trading Standards on your behalf.

Citizens Advice:

<https://www.citizensadvice.org.uk/consumer/scams/reporting-a-scam/>

To complain about a limited company visit:

<https://www.gov.uk/complain-company>

Mail scams

Mail scams are sent by post and may be addressed to you with your name. They contain fake claims or offers that are designed to con you out of your money.

Beware of

Lotteries, including foreign lotteries, or prize draws claiming you have won a fortune. These quite often look legitimate, with barcodes or ID numbers. The letter will ask you to pay an administration fee, buy a product or call a premium rate phone number to claim your prize.

Psychics and clairvoyants who claim to have seen something in your future.

“Pyramid” investment schemes, these will ask you to pay a fee and recruit friends or family members to get a return on your investment.

Letters addressed from a “solicitor” about unclaimed inheritance, often from a “relative” that you have never even heard of.

What to do

Reject and ignore:

If you receive a letter that you think is a scam, ignore it, do not call any telephone number. Numbers that start with an 09 cost you up to £4 per minute.

Report:

Join a mail marshal scheme, where you send them your scam mail so that they can catch the scammers.

Verify:

If you are unsure, check the details of the organisation online (ask a family member or friend if you do not have the internet).

Opt out:

Try to avoid being added to mailing lists, for example when you register to vote. Tick the Opt Out of the edited register (this is also known as the open register) as this can be used to sell on your details, thus the increase in unsolicited "Junk Mail".

Reduce your junk mail:

Register with a mailing preference service. This will put an end to mail from the direct mailing companies contacting you. This will reduce but not stop all of them. Unfortunately, it is not easy to control what people send you, but you can control your answer.

Who to contact:

- Tell Royal Mail if you think you have received scam mail and send it directly to them with a covering letter.
- Report details of overseas scams to Citizens Advice.

Courier fraud

You may get called on your mobile or landline by someone who claims to be from your bank or the police. They may say their systems have spotted a fraudulent payment on your account, card or perhaps your card is due to expire and needs to be replaced. They may say that they need your help to investigate a crime and ask you to withdraw cash from your bank.

They might suggest that you hang up and re-dial the number of their bank or police force to reassure you that they're genuine. However, they don't disconnect the call from the landline so that when you dial the real phone number, you're still speaking to the same fraudster.

They'll then ask you to read out your credit or debit card PIN or type it on your phone keypad. They may ask for details of other accounts you hold with the bank or elsewhere to grab more information.

Then they promise to send a courier to you to collect your bank card or cash. The fraudster will have your name, address, full bank details, card and its PIN, and withdraw cash, use your card to make purchases or may even use the information to commit identity fraud in your name.

Beware of

After some trust has been established, the fraudster may suggest that some money has been removed from a bank account and staff at their local bank branch are responsible.

Fraudsters may say that a suspect has already been arrested but the "police" need money from the bank for evidence.

Fraudsters may even ask you to go to a business such as a jeweller or currency exchange as they believe it is operating fraudulently and they require assistance to help secure evidence.

How to protect yourself

The Police or the bank will NEVER contact you out of the blue.

The police nor the bank will NEVER send anyone to collect your bank card from you.

They will also NEVER do the following:

- Inform you that you are needed as part of an undercover investigation.
- Ask you to attend your bank and withdraw large sums of money or buy an expensive item or purchase gift cards.
- No bank will issue counterfeit money.
- Neither the police nor the bank will ever send a "courier" to collect money, goods, gift cards or your bank card, and PIN.

Should you receive any call like this, immediately hang up the phone, use a different phone if possible, or wait 10 minutes, then call your bank with the number that is on the back of your bank card, or the police on 101.

Never press re-dial.

Alternatively call a trusted person, like a family member or neighbour for advice.

Advice is available from Crimestoppers, Action Fraud, Citizens Advice, Age UK and your local bank.

Identity Theft

Your name, address and date of birth is enough information for fraudsters to create another "you". An ID thief can use several methods to find out your personal details and use this information to open bank accounts, apply for loans, take out credit cards and apply for benefits in your name. Below are a few signs to look out for that might mean you have been or may become a victim.

If you lose important documents like your driving licence or passport, you must contact the passport office or the DVLA as soon as you realise they are missing.

If transactions appear on your bank statement that you do not recognise, contact your bank and have the card frozen.

If you are refused loans or credit cards despite having a good credit history, then check your full credit account via Experian, Clear Score or similar. If you receive letters in your name from debt collectors or solicitors relating to debts that are not yours, contact these companies as soon as possible.

You can also use credit reference agencies to check your details. Also register with CIFAS at: <https://www.cifas.org.uk/services/identity-protection/protective-registration/application-form>, who will put a fraud marker on your accounts.

How to protect yourself

- Don't throw out anything with your name, address or financial details without shredding it first.
- If you receive an unsolicited email or phone call from what appears to be your bank or building society asking for your security details, never reveal your full password, login details or account numbers. Be aware that a bank will never ask for your PIN or for a whole security number or password.
- If you are concerned about the source of a call, wait five minutes and call your bank using a trusted phone number, from a different telephone, if possible.
- Check your statements carefully and report anything suspicious to the bank or financial service provider concerned.
- Don't leave things like bills lying around for others to look at.
- If you're expecting a bank or credit card statement or a new card and it doesn't arrive, tell your bank or credit card company.
- If you move house, ask Royal Mail to redirect your post for at least a year.

The below credit reference agencies offer a credit report checking service to alert you to any key changes on your credit file that could indicate potential fraudulent activity:

- TransUnion
- Equifax
- Experian
- ClearScore
- Noddle

It is particularly helpful to check your personal credit file 2-3 months after you have moved house.

Investment fraud

Investment fraud usually involves criminals contacting people out of the blue and convincing them to invest in schemes that are actually worthless or do not exist. Once the criminals have received a payment they will encourage further payments or request a fee to release your funds.

If you're contacted out of the blue about an investment opportunity, chances are it's a high-risk investment or a scam. Scammers usually cold-call but contact can also come by email, post, social media, word of mouth or at a seminar or exhibition. Scams are often advertised online too.

If you get cold-called, hang up. If you get unexpected offers by email or text, simply ignore them.

Callers may pretend they aren't cold - calling you by referring to a brochure or an email they sent you - that's why it's important you know how to spot the other warning signs.

Spot the warning signs:

Time pressure:

They might offer you a bonus or discount if you invest before a set date or say the opportunity is only available for a short period.

Social proof:

They may share fake reviews, add fake celebrity endorsements and claim other clients have invested or want in on the deal to encourage people to invest.

Unrealistic returns:

Fraudsters often promise tempting returns that sound too good to be true. IT IS!

False authority:

Using convincing literature and websites, claiming to be regulated, speaking with authority on investment products.

Flattery:

Building a friendship with you to lull you into a false sense of security.

Remote access:

Scammers may pretend to help you and ask you to download software or an app so they can access your device. This could enable them to access your bank account or make payments using your card.

Do your research into the company that you are about to invest in, you can check these out on the FCA (Financial Conduct Authority) website <https://www.fca.org.uk/>

Easy Money

Money Mule

Money muling is a type of money laundering. Money laundering is a method of disguising where money from crime has come from by moving money through multiple bank accounts. Criminals will recruit people – known as money mules to do this.

Some people do not know that they are being used as a money mule, maybe a friend or online partner has asked you if they could have some money transferred into your bank account as theirs “is locked” and for you to then forward this on to another person.

It could be possible that you have been sent cash in the post and that you need to send this on.

Money laundering is a criminal offence, your bank accounts could be closed if you are suspected of laundering funds. You could have problems getting credit in the future and this could also affect your credit rating.

Always say no if someone asks you to use your bank account. If you are sent funds do not send them on. Instead inform your bank.

Friend in need scam

This all starts with a WhatsApp or a text message from an unknown number, the message starts "Hi Mum" or "Hi Dad", with a message that usually states "I am texting you off a friend's phone as I have smashed mine/dropped it down the toilet, please can you text me on my new number as this phone is about to die."

You believe that this is your child. After a couple of messages they then tell you that they have a bill that they need to pay and cannot access their banking app on their new phone. They ask if you would pay this for them and state that they will send you the money back as soon as they can.

You may only realise that it's a scam when they don't answer the phone or say something in a message that seems out of character.

These messages are from fraudsters. If you receive a message like this, do not reply or engage in any conversation. Call the person the fraudster is purporting to be on the number that you have for them to check the veracity of the message.

Indemnity claim

If you have been a victim of fraud, there may be a possibility that you could receive funds back. This is only available with the bank that you have transferred the funds from.

In the first instance, call your bank and ask to speak to the fraud department, ensure that you have all your account details to hand of the account that you transferred the monies from.

Your bank will advise you that they will need to investigate your case and will advise you once they have investigated.

If your bank decides they will not be refunding any monies to you, then you should call your bank, speak to the fraud department, and confirm that you wish to raise a formal complaint.

Again, the bank will review this and then get back to you with their decision.

If the bank refuses to refund you, then you may be able to take your case to the Financial Ombudsman by visiting <https://www.financial-ombudsman.org.uk/make-complaint>.

Cyber advice

If you think you have downloaded a virus:

Consider having your computer looked at by a trusted technician in order to determine if malicious software was installed on your machine during the call. For advice on how to recover an infected device please visit: www.ncsc.gov.uk/guidance/hacked-device-action-to-take

Always question unsolicited calls, texts or emails requesting your personal or financial information (Name, address, bank details, email or phone number).

Report any identification that may have been accessed from your device as stolen.

You can also check with HMRC and the electoral register to ensure your details haven't been changed, for example, address details.

• Stolen or Missing Passport: Passport photo or copy of passport sent – Tel: 0300 222 0000

• Driving licence: If this is compromised, contact your insurance company and the DVLA.

• National Insurance number: Contact the Inland Revenue/HMRC to confirm the compromise. Tel: 0300 200 3500 (Mon - Fri: 8am to 8pm & Sat: 8am to 4pm)

Two-Factor Authentication (2FA) - This can also be referred to as 'two step verification or multifactor verification (2SV)'.

Two factor authentication (2FA) greatly increases the security of your account, even if they have your password.

For more information visit: www.ncsc.gov.uk/cyberaware/home

Enable strong privacy settings:

Social Media:

- Approve who follows you and what you get tagged in.
- Disable/hide your email address and mobile number from linking to your social media accounts within a search engine.
- Change your settings to 'hide' your friends/followers to protect yourself from falling victim to account impersonation, these are set up to bypass privacy settings and target friends/followers with targeted scams. Remove unused connected devices that are no longer required.
- Think about what personal information is stored, for example, your full date of birth.
- Don't let the world know your location, do this by clicking 'disable your location'.
- Use a different password for each social media account.
- Ensure your linked email is up to date, having an old email leaves your account at risk and will make it difficult if you ever need to recover the account.

For further information on these settings:

<https://www.eastmidlandscybersecure.co.uk/resources>

Computer service software fraud:

This occurs when fraudsters posing as legitimate companies, such as your internet service provider (ISP) or Microsoft, call to tell you that there's a problem with your computer, laptop, tablet or mobile.

They'll say something like: There's a virus on your computer or there is something wrong with your computer or your router or internet connection are not performing properly.

They might say that they can fix the problem for a fee, or alternatively they can compensate you for the problem you are experiencing. What these fraudsters really want is for you to unwittingly grant them remote access to your computer by installing software or visiting a particular website, and for you to give them your payment details.

What can be done about it:

The majority of these frauds are carried out overseas through international call centres, but by reporting such calls to Action Fraud, important intelligence can be gathered, and preventative action can be taken by the police. For example, suspending telephone numbers and websites used to commit this type of fraud.

Legitimate companies like Microsoft, Amazon, Virgin, Sky, BT and Google will never cold call you asking for remote access to your computer or for your financial details.

Take the time to think about the documents, data, and identification on the device, did you have a copy of your passport, drivers' licence or other personal details on your computer.

Notify your bank if financial payment has been taken or made and you believe it to be a scam.

How to protect yourself

Removing software:

Remote access tools like Anydesk are genuine, however this can be used with malicious intent in the event of a scam. Remote access tools are: AnyDesk, TeamViewer, Quick Support, Zoho Assist and more. These are genuine software companies.

It is important to uninstall anything that you don't recall downloading or has appeared. If you feel confident and able to do so you can attempt to uninstall any remote software applications yourself, alternatively please speak to friends, family, or a local computer expert (please do your research first), to help you with this.

If you think you might have been a victim of Cybercrime:

Please visit: www.actionfraud.police.uk or call: 0300 123 2040, to report the incident. Alternatively, if you are currently being subjected to a live and ongoing cyber-attack then please contact us on 101.
